Conversation Starters. Given my financial situation, should I choose an investment advisory service? Why or why not? How will you choose investments to recommend to me? What is your relevant experience, including your licenses, education and other qualifications? What do these qualifications mean?

What fees will I Pay?

Description of Principal Fees & Costs. The investment advisory fees that The Goff Financial Group charges are based on the net asset value of the managed portfolio at the end of each quarter. The company offers a tiered fee schedule. The maximum annual fee charged to clients is 1.25% for the first $2 million tier, 1.00% for the next $3 million tier and 0.90% for the remaining balance. The Company may charge a minimum fixed fee. The Company may also charge for the preparation of financial plans based on an agreed-upon fixed fee or hourly basis. The broker-dealer/custodian on your account may charge you fees for maintaining your account and trading commissions. Should funds be held in your portfolio such as exchange traded funds (ETFs) and traditional mutual funds, you would incur internal fees from these funds unless such fees are waived by the fund company. The Company does not receive any of these internal fees nor does it receive any fees or commissions charged by your broker-dealer/custodian for trading or account services. You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce any amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying. For more information about the fees that the Company charges and the other fees and expenses that you may incur, please see Company’s Form ADV Part 2A including Items 5.

Conversation Starters. Help me understand how these fees and costs might affect my investments. If I give you $10,000 to invest, how much will go to fees and costs, and how much will be invested for me?

What are your legal obligations to me when acting as my investment adviser? How else does your company make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we act as your investment adviser, we have to act in your best interest and not put our interest ahead of yours. At the same time, the way we make money creates some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the investment advice we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means. Here are some other examples to help you understand what this means:

- If you hire the Company to manage your assets, the Company receives investment advisory fees based on the dollar value of assets that the Company manages. Therefore, the Company may have an incentive to recommend adding assets to accounts that the Company manages on your behalf. For example, if you roll over a 401k to an IRA the Company manages, the Company will be paid advisory fees based on value of the IRA assets. If you decide not to roll over your 401 to an IRA under the Company's management, there are no advisory fees charged by the Company, unless the Company is already managing these assets for you in your 401k plan for a fee. The fee charged by Company for the management of 401k assets may also be less than the fee charged for managing assets in an IRA. Thus, the Company in this example has an incentive for you to roll over your 401k to your IRA under its management.
- While paying compensation to the Company's advisor team based on revenue can incentivize its team to provide a very high level of service to you and other Clients, such compensation arrangements may encourage its representatives to recommend that you become a Client and/or invest more with the Company.

The Company's financial professionals do not receive any commissions or fees from any financial products they may recommend to you, as the Company works directly for all of its Clients on a fee-only basis. There are also no sales quotas of any kind for any of the financial professionals employed by the Company. The Company expects, however, that there will always be some potential conflict of interest with any type of compensation arrangement between two parties such as the Company does not get paid unless you become a Client. For additional information regarding the Company's services as well as potential conflicts of interest, please see the Company's Form ADV Part 2A including items 5 and 12.

Conversation Starter. How might your conflicts of interest affect me, and how will you address them?

How do your financial professionals make money? The Goff Financial Group seeks to provide each financial professional on the Company's advisor team with a fair and equitable compensation arrangement that promotes and incentivizes a high level of service and Client satisfaction. To promote the retention of highly qualified employees and to help fairly compensate the Company's employees, the Company's financial professionals are paid a base salary or at an hourly rate, as well as incentive-based compensation based on factors such as length of employment. No employee is subject to a sales quota. To promote a team environment and the highest level of Client service, incentive forms of compensation are shared by the Company's advisor team. The Company believes that its employee compensation methods promote a team environment that provides a higher level of service that benefits its Clients. The Company also believes its compensation methods for its employees more closely align the Clients' interests with the Company's and financial professionals' interests. The Company also believes its compensation structure seeks to eliminate the conflicts of interest seen with other types of financial services providers such as within commission-based sales environments at some broker-dealers, banks and insurance companies. To eliminate conflicts of interest, neither the Company or its employees receive any fees or commissions from any third-party financial products in a Client's account.
